Cooper Standard Named to Newsweek's America's Most Responsible Companies 2023 List for Fourth Consecutive Year

America's Most Responsible Companies were selected based on publicly available key performance indicators (KPIs) derived from CSR Reports, Sustainability Reports and other reports, as well as an independent survey. The KPIs focused on company performance in the environmental, social and corporate governance areas, while the independent survey asked U.S. citizens about their perception of company activities related to corporate social responsibility. The final list, which can be viewed on Newsweek's website, recognizes the top 500 most responsible companies in the United States, spanning 14 industries. Cooper Standard has been included on the list of most responsible companies in the United States since its inception four years ago.

"It is an honor to again be recognized in Newsweek's America's Most Responsible Companies list," said Jeffrey Edwards, chairman and CEO, Cooper Standard. "Cooper Standard's commitment to addressing ESG issues makes our team, partnerships and business stronger as we continue developing innovative products and systems to address our customers' ever-changing needs."

Cooper Standard offers insights into the ESG topics considered most important by the Company's stakeholders through an annual corporate responsibility report that covers the Company's progress toward world-class performance and actions to elevate value for all stakeholders. In its latest report, "TOGETHER," the Company incorporated new goals for renewable energy and waste reduction, along with a focus on climate change risks and impacts. This report also shares progress on its long-term goals supporting key ESG material topics.

The Newsweek recognition serves as further validation of Cooper Standard's commitment to ethical business practices. Earlier this year, the Company was again recognized by Ethisphere, a global leader in defining and advancing the standards of ethical business practices, as one of the 2022 World's Most Ethical Companies.
