

COOPER STANDARD HOSTS STELLANTIS TO CELEBRATE DODGE CHARGER NORTH AMERICAN VEHICLE OF THE YEAR RECOGNITION

Cooper Standard recently welcomed Stellantis to its global headquarters in Northville, Michigan, to recognize and celebrate a major industry honor: the Dodge Charger being named the 2026 North American Car of the Year.

This prestigious award recognizes excellence in innovation, design, performance and overall value. The all-new Charger stood out for its bold reimagining while maintaining its iconic heritage.

Cooper Standard supports the Dodge Charger with a range of advanced sealing and fluid handling systems, contributing to vehicle performance, efficiency and overall quality. This collaboration reflects the strength of the partnership and the ability of both teams to deliver solutions that meet evolving industry demands.

The visit brought together team members from both organizations to recognize the collaboration behind this achievement and the shared commitment to delivering high-performing, innovative solutions.

The celebration also provided an opportunity to recognize the contributions of Cooper Standard employees whose work supports this program. Their focus on quality, execution and teamwork continues to drive success across key customer platforms.

This honor reflects Cooper Standard's mission to be the First Choice of the stakeholders it serves. By working closely with stakeholders like Stellantis, the Cooper Standard continues to demonstrate its commitment to collaboration, innovation and delivering value across the automotive industry.

As the industry continues to evolve, Cooper Standard remains focused on strengthening partnerships and advancing solutions that support the next generation of mobility.
